9. Athens is a city in Greece. About 2000 years ago the people there worshipped the goddess of wisdom called Athena. They wanted to please Athena, so they built temples for her on a hill in the centre of their city. This area was called the Acropolis which means 'high city'. The grandest temple on the Acropolis was the Parthenon. Many of its columns still stand today.

Most people did not go inside the Parthenon as people go into churches, temples or mosques today. They prayed outside. Inside was simply a huge statue of Athena made from gold and ivory.

The acropolis was also a place for everyone to meet and enjoy themselves. There were many festivals and people would come in their best clothes. Sometimes there were sacrifices, which meant everyone had free meat to eat. This was luxury because there was little space for people to keep farm animals in Athens.
